13 Signatures on wills

(1) For the purposes of this Act, a person shall be held to have signed a will in due form if he has written thereon in his own hand his surname or last name or a name by which he is ordinarily known:

Provided that it shall be sufficient for a testator to sign his will by making a mark thereon.

(2) The fact that a signature on a will is illegible or partly formed or is misspelt shall not invalidate the signature for the purposes of this Act.

14 Incorporation of documents in wills by reference

For the purpose of clarifying, explaining or giving details of any disposition or provision in his will, a testator may refer to any document that is in existence at the time he makes the will, and the relevant provisions of such document shall be construed as having been incorporated in the will notwithstanding that the document may not itself have been signed and witnessed as a will in accordance with section eight.

15 Revocation of wills

(1) Subject to this section, a testator may at any time before his death revoke his will wholly or partly and either absolutely or conditionally.

(2) A joint and mutual will shall not be revocable by a surviving testator—

(a) to the extent that the will effects a massing of the estates or any property of the joint testators; and (b) if the surviving testator has accepted some benefit under the will.

(3) A will or any part thereof shall be revoked if—

(a) the testator makes a new will, including an oral will, which expressly revokes the first-mentioned will or part thereof or which is inconsistent with the provisions of the first-mentioned will or part thereof; or

(b) the testator, or any person acting with the specific authority of the testator—

(i) obliterates, renders illegible, excises, tears up, burns or otherwise destroys the will or part thereof; or

(iii) obliterates, renders illegible, excises or otherwise destroys the testator’s signature either at the end of the will or on the page containing the part concerned, as the case may be;

(c) in the case of an oral will, the testator does any act which amounts to a revocation of the oral will in accordance with the law or custom under which the oral will was made.

(4) Where a testator voluntarily sells, donates or otherwise disposes of any property that is the subject-matter of a legacy in his will, he shall be presumed, unless the contrary is proved, to have intended to revoke the legacy to the extent that it relates to such property.

(6) If a will that was in the possession or custody of the testator at the time of his death, or any part of such a will, has been subjected to any alteration, marking or partial destruction such as is referred to in subsection (3), it shall be presumed, unless the contrary is proved, that such alteration, marking or partial destruction was effected by the testator with the intention of revoking the will or the part thereof concerned.

(7) If a will which was last known to have been in the possession of the testator, or any page of such a will, cannot be found after his death, it shall be presumed, unless the contrary is proved, that the testator destroyed the will or page concerned with the intention of revoking it. 15A Power of Master to declare a will to be revoked

(1) If the Master is satisfied that a testator has□

(a) made a written indication on his will or, before his death, caused such an indication to be made; or

(b) performed any other act with regard to his will which is apparent on the face of the will or, before his death, caused such an act to be performed; or

(c) drafted another document or, before his death, caused another document to be drafted; by which he intended to revoke his will or a part of his will, the Master may declare the will or the part concerned, as the case may be, to be revoked:

Provided that, before acting in accordance with this section, the Master shall conduct an inquiry to ascertain whether the document so drafted or the act so performed does reflect the testator’s known or likely intention.

(2) Any person who is aggrieved by a decision of the Master may appeal to an appropriate court within thirty days of being notified of the decision of the Master.

16 Effect of testator's subsequent marriage on will

- (1) Subject to this section, a will shall become void upon the subsequent marriage of the testator.
- (2) A joint and mutual will shall not become void upon the subsequent marriage of a surviving testator— (a) to the extent that the will effects a massing of the estates or any property of the joint testators; and (b) if the surviving testator has accepted some benefit under the will before his subsequent marriage.
- (3) A will made by a man who is married under a system permitting polygamy shall not become void if, while still so married to one or more wives, he marries another wife.
- (4) Where it appears from a will that when it was made the testator was expecting to be married and that he intended that—
 - (a) the will should not become void upon the expected marriage, the will shall not become void upon that marriage;
 - (b) a particular disposition or provision in the will should not become void upon the marriage—
 - (i) that disposition or provision shall take effect notwithstanding the marriage; and
 - (ii) any other disposition or provision in the will shall take effect also, unless it appears that the testator intended the disposition or provision to become void upon the marriage.
- (5) A will shall not become void upon the subsequent marriage of the testator to the extent that the will disposes of property which would not have gone to the spouse or issue of the subsequent marriage if the testator had died intestate.

17 Effect of dissolution or annulment of testator's marriage on wills

- (1) Where, after a testator has made a will, a decree or order of a court dissolves or annuls his marriage—
 - (a) the will shall have effect as if any appointment of his former spouse as an executor or administrator were omitted; and
 - (b) any disposition or benefit to or in favour of his former spouse shall lapse; except in so far as it appears that the testator intended otherwise.
 - (2) Where—
 - (a) by the terms of a will any disposition or benefit is subject to a usufruct or fiduciary right granted to a former spouse of the testator; and
 - (b) the usufruct or fiduciary right lapses in terms of paragraph (b) of subsection (1); the disposition or benefit shall be treated—
 - (i) as if it had not been subject to the usufruct or fiduciary right; and
 - (ii) if it was contingent upon the termination of the usufruct or fiduciary right, as if it had not been so contingent;
- except in so far as it appears that the testator intended otherwise.

18 Effect of subsequent birth, legitimation or adoption of children on will

- (1) If, after a testator has made a will—

 - (b) an illegitimate child of the testator is legitimated or, in accordance with customary law, is legitimated or otherwise acknowledged or recognized as a child of its father; or
 - (c) the testator adopts a child in accordance with the law relating to adoption; then, unless the will makes some other provision for the child or unless it clearly appears that the testator intended otherwise, the child shall be entitled to the following benefits from the testator's estate—
 - (i) if the will makes no provision for any child of the testator, the child shall be entitled to any benefit that he would have received if the testator had died intestate; or
 - (ii) if the will makes provision for any other child or children of the testator, the child shall be entitled to the same benefits as, or to benefits of equivalent value to, those that are receivable under the will by—
 - A. the other child or children, where there is only one such other child or where the will treats all such other children equally; or
 - B. the other child or other children, as the case may be, who receive the benefits of smallest value, where the will treats the other such children differently.
- (2) The benefits payable in terms of this section to a child referred to in paragraph (a), (b) or (c) of subsection (1) shall be deemed to be—
 - (a) a legacy payable under the will concerned, if the will makes no provision for any child of the testator or if the will provides for a legacy to be paid to each other such child or to the child who receives the benefits of smallest value, as the case may be:

Provided that, where the will directs that such legacies or legacy shall be paid from a particular fund or source, the benefits payable to the child referred to in paragraph (a), (b) or (c) of subsection (1) shall be payable from the same fund or source;

- (b) an inheritance payable from the residue of the testator's estate if the benefits payable under the will to each other child of the testator or to the child who receives the benefits of smallest value, as the case may be, are payable from the residue of the estate after all legacies have been paid; and shall be subject to failure, abatement or reduction accordingly.

(3) Nothing in subsection (1) shall be construed as prejudicing the rights of any child to receive any property, maintenance or other benefit from a deceased person's estate in terms of any enactment.

19 Revival of revoked or void wills

(1) A will or any part thereof that has been revoked or become void in terms of section fifteen, sixteen or seventeen may be revived by—

- (a) the subsequent remaking of the will or part concerned; or
(b) a subsequent will which expressly or by clear implication revives the revoked or void will or part concerned.

(2) The revocation or rendering void of a will or any part of a will shall not have the effect of reviving any other will or any part of another will that may have been revoked by the first-mentioned will or part thereof.

20 Rectification of wills

(1) If an appropriate court is satisfied that a will is so expressed that it fails to carry out the testator's intentions, in consequence of— (a) a clerical error; or

(b) a failure to understand the testator's instructions; or

(c) a failure on the part of the testator to appreciate the effect of the words used in the will; the appropriate court may order that the will shall be rectified by the insertion, deletion or substitution of any words so as to carry out the testator's intentions.

(2) Subsection (1) shall not be construed as limiting in any way the power of an appropriate court under any other law to order the rectification of a will.

21 Admissibility of evidence in connection with rectification and interpretation of wills

(1) An appropriate court may receive and rely on extrinsic evidence, including evidence of the testator's intention—

(a) when determining whether or not to order the rectification of a will; or (b) to assist in the interpretation of a will in so far as—

(i) any part of the will is meaningless; or

(ii) the language used in any part of the will is ambiguous on the face of it; or

(iii) evidence shows that the language used in any part of the will is ambiguous in the light of surrounding circumstances.

(2) Subsection (1) shall not be construed as limiting in any way the power of an appropriate court under any other law to receive and rely on extrinsic evidence in any case relating to a will.

22 Conflict of laws: Application of foreign laws in relation to wills

(1) In this section—

“country” means a state or territory, or part of a state or territory, which is subject to a single system of territorially-applicable law;

“internal law”, in relation to any country, means the law that would apply within that country in a case where no question of the law in force in any other country arose:

Provided that, if in any country there is in force a system of personal law applicable to wills made by persons such as the testator in the case concerned on the ground of his race, tribe, religion, caste or other personal characteristic, that system of personal law shall be deemed to be the internal law of the country concerned in relation to that particular testator and his will.

(2) The question whether or not a testator had capacity to make a will disposing of—

(a) movable property, shall be determined according to the internal law of the country in which he was domiciled when he made the will;

(b) immovable property, shall be determined according to the internal law of the country in which the immovable property is situated; and the question shall be determined according to such internal law as it existed at the time the will was made.

(3) The question whether or not a person has capacity to receive a benefit under a will disposing of—

(a) movable property, shall be determined according to the internal law of—

(i) the country in which the beneficiary is domiciled on the date of the testator's death, where the question of his capacity to receive the benefit arises because he is a minor, a married person, a body corporate or because of some similar personal or inherent characteristic; or

(ii) the country in which the testator was domiciled at the date of his death, in any case not mentioned in subparagraph (i);

(b) immovable property, shall be determined—

(i) according to the internal law of the country in which the immovable property is situated; and

(ii) in the case of a beneficiary that is a body corporate, additionally according to the internal law of the country in which the body corporate was constituted or established;
and the question shall be determined according to such internal law as it existed when the testator died.

(4) A will shall be valid in respect of its form—

- (a) if its form complies with the internal law of—
 - (i) the country in which the will was made; or
 - (ii) any country in which the testator was domiciled or ordinarily resident, either when he made the will or when he died; or
 - (iii) any state or territory of which the testator was a citizen or national, either when he made the will or when he died; or
- (b) to the extent that the will disposes of any movable property, if the form of the will complies with the law of the country in which the property concerned is situated either when the will was made or when the testator died; or
- (c) to the extent that the will disposes of any immovable property, if the form of the will complies with the law of the country in which the immovable property is situated; or
- (d) to the extent that in the will the testator exercises a power of appointment or other function conferred upon him by any instrument, if the form of the will complies with the law governing the essential validity of the instrument; or
- (e) to the extent that the will expressly or impliedly revokes another will or part of another will which is formally valid by virtue of paragraph (a), (b), (c) or (d), if the form of the first-mentioned will complies with any law under which the revoked will or part thereof is formally valid; or
- (f) where the will was made on board a vessel or aircraft of any description, if the form of the will complies with the internal law of the country with which, having regard to any relevant circumstances, the vessel or aircraft may be taken to have been most closely connected when the will was made.

(5) For the purposes of subsection (4)—

- (a) where under the law of any country—
 - (i) a testator of a particular age, citizenship or nationality or possessing any other personal qualification or disqualification is required to observe any special formality in the making of a will; or
 - (ii) a witness to a will is required to possess any particular qualification; such requirement shall be regarded as a requirement relating to the form of the will;
- (b) in determining whether or not the form of a will complies with a particular law, regard shall be had to the requirements of that law when the will was made, but this shall not prevent account being taken of a subsequent alteration in that law after that time if the alteration enables the will to be treated as properly made;
- (c) if there are two or more systems of law in force within any state or territory that relate to the formal validity of wills, the internal law of the state or territory shall be ascertained for the purpose of subparagraph (iii) of paragraph (a) of subsection (4) as follows—
 - (i) if there is in force throughout the state or territory a rule indicating which of those systems can properly be applied to the case in question, that rule shall be followed;
 - (ii) if there is no rule such as is referred to in subparagraph (i), the internal law shall be the system with which the testator was most closely connected when he made the will or when he died, as the case may be.

(6) The meaning of any word, expression or provision in a will shall be ascertained according to the internal law of the country in which the testator was domiciled when he made the will and in accordance with such internal law as it then existed, unless a contrary intention appears from the terms of the will or from any admissible extrinsic evidence.

(7) The essential validity of a will, namely the validity and effect of rights, interests and obligations created by the will and the right of persons not specified in the will to receive any benefits thereunder, shall be determined according to the internal law of—

- (a) the country in which the testator was domiciled when he died, to the extent that the will disposes of movable property;
- (b) the country in which the immovable property concerned is situated, to the extent that the will disposes of immovable property;

and the question shall be determined according to such internal law as it existed when the testator died:

Provided that the question whether or not a person who has accepted a benefit under a will is obliged to divest himself of any of his own property that has been disposed of to another person under the same will shall be determined according to the nature of the property accepted by him under the will and without regard to the nature of his own property that has been disposed of by the will.

(8) The question whether or not a will has been wholly or partially revoked or rendered void—

- (a) by the dissolution or annulment of the testator's marriage or by the testator's subsequent marriage shall be determined according to the internal law of the country in which the testator was domiciled immediately after the dissolution or annulment of the marriage or the subsequent marriage, as the case may be;
- (b) by the destruction of the will or part thereof or by the making of a subsequent will or through any other cause not mentioned in paragraph (a), shall be determined according to the internal law of—
 - (i) the country in which the testator was domiciled when the will was allegedly revoked or rendered void, to the extent that the will disposed of movable property;
 - (ii) the country in which the immovable property concerned is situated, to the extent that the will that was allegedly revoked or rendered void disposed of immovable property; and the question shall be determined according to such internal law as it existed when the event or act which allegedly revoked the will or rendered it void took place.

(9) This section shall not affect the validity of any will or part thereof which, but for this section, would be valid.

23 Theft, concealment and destruction of wills

(1) Any person who—

- (a) during the lifetime of the testator and without his specific authorization; or
- (b) after the death of the testator; alters any wording in a will, steals, wilfully conceals or wilfully destroys any will shall be guilty of an offence and liable to a fine not exceeding level ten or to imprisonment for a period not exceeding five years or to both such fine and such imprisonment.

Subsection as amended by s. 5 of Act 21 of 1998 and s. 4 of Act 22 of 2001.

(2) A prosecution for an offence in terms of subsection (1) shall not—

- (a) prevent the institution of civil proceedings against any person in respect of the theft, concealment or destruction of the will concerned; or
- (b) render any person immune from any liability or disability which he may incur under this Act or any other law as a result of or arising out of the theft, concealment or destruction of the will concerned.
